JAPS LEFT ON LUZON FACE ANNIHILATION

Jap Generals On Okinawa Slit Stomachs In Formal, but Grisly, Hari Kari Ceremonies

By AL DOPKING
10TH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Okinawa, June 27.—(AP)—The bodies of the Japanese commanding general on Okinawa and his chief of staff, who had slit their stomachs in hari kari ceremonies, have been found in shallow rock graves at the southeastern tip of the island.

Col. Cecil W. Nist of Salem, Ore., 24th Army Corps staff officer, said the bodies, in full field uniforms with medals and insignia, have been identified as those of Lt. Gen. Mitsuru Ushijima, commanding general of the 32nd Japanese Army, and Lt. Gen. Isamu Cho, his chief of staff.

The hari kari ceremony for Ushijima and Cho was held at the entrance to a huge headquarters cave on Hill 89 while 10th Army soldiers were 100 yards away.

Buried with Cho was a heavy comforter and white silk mattress cover. On it he had written:

"Twenty second day, sixth month 20th year of Showa era. I depart without regret, fear, shame or obligation. Army Chief of Staff Cho Isamu. Age of departure 51 years."

The story of the hari kari ceremony was told by a Japanese prisoner who said he had been a cook for General Ushijima.

On the night of June 21, the cook was instructed to prepare a dinner for an important occasion. He prepared rice, canned meats, potatoes, fried fish cakes, salmon, bean soup, fried cabbage, pineapples and tea. There was sake for an appetizer.

At 3 A. M. on June 22, the cook was preparing breakfast when an orderly whispered Ushijima and Cho were going to commit "seppuku," Japanese term for honorable suicide.

Then both generals appeared in full field uniform with their medals pinned to their blouses, their boots highly polished. They were followed by members of the staff to a narrow ledge.

YANK INVASION OF NEW ISLAND ON, NIPS ASSERT

Dwindling Gasoline Supply Blasted Again as B-29s Hit Refinery in Bad Weather

By LEONARD MILLIMAN

By The Associated Press.

Radio Tokyo reported Allied invasion forces were fighting their way onto Kume Island, 50 miles west of Okinawa, and predicted American assault forces may land on the China Coast preparatory to invading Japan as Japanese troops in the northern Philippines fled to the mountains from the jaws of a rapidly closing Yank trap.

Fifty Superforts paced the air war with a pre-midnight strike at Japan's largest remaining oil refinery in the second B-29 attack in 14 hours. Smaller units of the Allied air arm listed 17 more small Japanese ships sunk.

Tokyo's unconfirmed invasion report said American amphibious units stormed Kume beaches yesterday, 50 miles west of Okinawa, and were engaged in "heavy fighting" by the defending garrison.

Between Kume and Okinawa are the American-held Kerama Islands which for days Tokyo has reported swarming with invasion forces.

U. S. Tenth Army forces mopping up Okinawa ran Japanese losses up to 111,351 as they rounded up 882 more prisoners.

Suicide Futile

Japanese hurled new waves of suicide aircraft at Okinawa Monday. They lost 12 and caused no damage. Okinawa-based American Marine and Army fighter planes have accounted for 596 enemy aircraft since mid-April. Escort carrier planes in 82 days of operations knocked out 279 others during the campaign, flying 35,000 sorties. Sixty-three escort airmen were lost.

B-29s packed high explosives in last night's strike at the Utsube River Oil Refinery, 18 miles southwest of Nagoya. It was a quick follow-up to the 500-plane fighter-escorted strike at ten warplants. Five raiders were lost and 70 made emergency landings on Iwo Jima.

Fighter planes heavily supported the rapidly moving American sweep of Cagayan Valley on Luzon Island in the northern Philippines where only 20 miles now separates the two jaws of the American-Filipino nattercracker. The 37th division swept 14 miles northward through Tuguegarao, as the 11th Airborne troops pushed down from the north. Some ten thousand Japanese fled to mountains on the eastern side of the valley while three U. S. divisions pushed through mountains on the west.

TURKEY IS WORRIED ABOUT DARDANELLES

Fear Voiced Over Russia's Plans - U. S. Appealed To

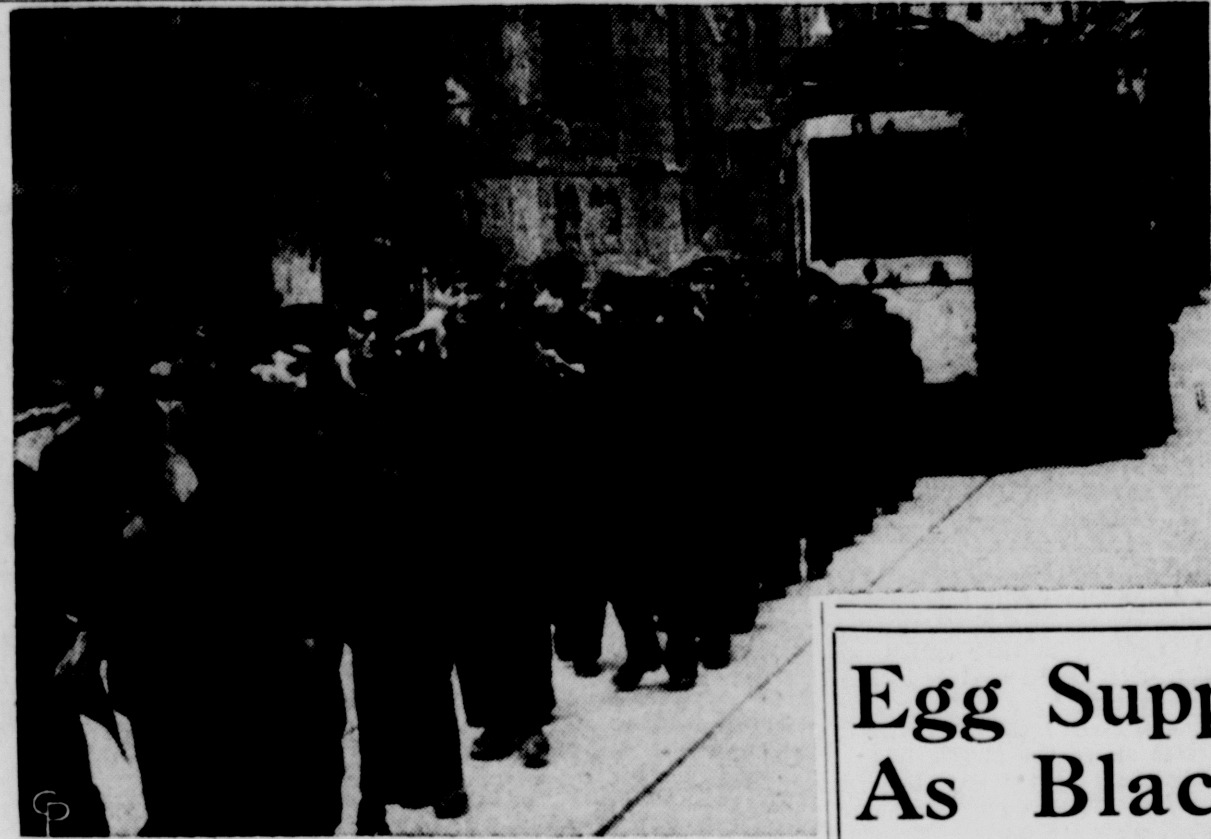

ANKARA, June 27.—(AP)—Turkey, disturbed by reports that Russia is seeking modification of the Montreux convention fixing the status of the Dardanelles, looked toward the United States and Britain today for a hint of their reaction.

During discussions preliminary to negotiation of a new Turkish-Russian pact of friendship and non-aggression in Moscow, the Russians raised for discussion the propriety of the northeastern Turkish province of Kars and the possibility of making changes in the Montreux convention which would give the Soviet Union a favored spot with respect to control of the Dardanelles.

HELICOPTER PREVENTION OF FROST IS PREDICTED

EAST LANSING, Mich., June 27.—(AP)—The use of helicopters to prevent frost from harming crops was predicted today by Paul M. Harmer, Michigan State College muck soils research specialist.

Harmer said if helicopters were flown back and forth at low levels over the fields, the planes' large propellers would stir the air and prevent frost from forming.

Egg Supply Shrinks As Black Market In Poultry Grows

Congressional Investigators Find Unscrupulous Dealers, And Even Consumers, Wiping Out Whole Flocks by Paying Prices That Farmers Can't Resist

(Ovid A. Martin, Associated Press farm editor, has just returned from a cross-country tour with the Anderson Food Shortage Investigating committee. This is the first of four stories in which he summarizes the American farmer's worries and analyzes why these worries are hampering food production.)

By OVID A. MARTIN

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP)—A nationwide black market in poultry threatens to bring on an acute egg shortage and possibly to destroy the nation's laying flocks.

The House Food Shortage Investigating Committee found on its tour of the Midwest and Far West that in many sections more than half the poultry moving to market is sold at from 10 to 50 per cent above legal prices.

Testimony was offered that fly-by-night dealers are driving up and down the countryside in search of poultry. They offer to buy laying hens, roosters or any kind of chicken available at prices which poultrymen find hard to resist.

Case after case was cited in which these illegal dealers bought entire laying flocks.

Poultrymen testified that prices offered by black markets were such that most farmers could make more money by selling their flocks now than by holding the hens for the eggs they would produce the rest of the year.

The poultryman would not only make more money, but save himself all the labor and feed that would be required if he kept the hens.

This liquidation of laying flocks is not confined to black market operations. Consumers themselves are going to the country to buy poultry direct from producers.

In California, witnesses said that in some cases dealers bought or rented entire ranches to get poultry.

Hotel and restaurant operators, feeling the pinch in red meats, also were reported to be going direct to farmers.

Poultrymen blamed the situation on (1) shortage of red meats, (2) excessive consumer spending power, (3) government price policies.

In the case of price policies, ceilings on eggs offer poultrymen a much less favorable return than prices being offered for poultry as meat.

Testimony of John Lawler, general manager of the poultry producers of Central California, was typical: "Maximum egg prices permitted by OPA ceiling operations have not provided the same margin of profit that black-market prices have netted to the producers of poultry meat. Neither have they provided the same margins of profit that have been provided other lines of endeavor."

Lawler urged an immediate increase in ceilings on eggs. "Such an increase," he said, "would encourage more producers to keep more laying hens on their farms, thus increasing the production of eggs."

Egg supply prospects for the last half of the year are further aggravated by the fact that eggs stored during the spring season of heavy production were less than half the quantity stored a year ago. Storage eggs are needed to fill the gap of low production during the summer and fall.

PRODUCTION IS NEAR ON CIVILIAN PLANES

Two-passenger Models Are Expected in Two Months

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP)—Production for civilian use of light planes that will carry two persons and have a cruising speed of 90 miles an hour will get under way shortly before Labor Day, John W. Friedlander, president of Aerona Aircraft Corp., Middletown, Ohio, announced today.

Equipment is ready for immediate reconversion and plans are complete for quick re-arrangement of assembly facilities.

"We have no fear," Friedlander said, "that now that we are free to return to civilian production we cannot obtain the necessary materials to re-establish personal plane production in full accordance with government regulations."

Hotel and restaurant operators, feeling the pinch in red meats, also were reported to be going direct to farmers.

Truman Makes Plea For Peace Charter

Security Conference Closes With Formal Signing Amid Atmosphere of Optimism—U. S. Ratification Appears Certain

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.—(AP)—A movement to win the quickest possible ratification for the United Nations charter grew among conference delegates today. It was spurred on by President Truman's urgent plea to make the new world peace plan "a living thing."

President Truman sent authors of the new world charter homeward the world around today with a stern admonition that "if we should falter in the future in our will to use it, millions now living will surely die."

Addressing the closing session of the World Security Conference, the Chief Executive pounded late yesterday on the theme that the drafting of the charter was only a first step.

The President asserted "artificial and economic trade barriers should be removed—to the end that the standard of living of as many peoples as possible throughout the world may be raised."

Mr. Truman ended his address with a warning that the remnants of Fascism and Nazism remaining in the world would continue an effort to divide the United Nations.

"But I know I speak for every one of you when I say that the United Nations will remain united."

The chief executive, after making the final address of the 9-week conference yesterday, is en route to Washington, by way of his home at Independence, Mo., to carry the charter personally before the Senate next Monday.

"I am sure," he told delegates of 50 nations here, "that the overwhelming sentiment of the people of my country and of their representatives in the Senate is in favor of immediate ratification."

An Associated Press poll which reached 26 of the delegations showed 20 of the 26 expect their new cars can get them.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP)—Defense Transportation Director J. Monroe Johnson predicted today it will be at least three years before all the people who want new cars can get them.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP)—Capitol Hill expects the army soon to cut the present 85-point score required for discharge to either 80 or 78.

The final decision will be made on the basis of reports being received by the War Department from field commanders.

TRUMAN SUCCESSION ORDER IS APPROVED

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP)—By a one-vote margin the House judiciary committee today approved President Truman's recommendation that congress make the speaker of the house next in line for the presidency, after the vice president.

The vote was 10 to 9, taken in executive session. Several of those who voted against the bill said they would prefer additional time to study the measure.

The measure, which provides that the speaker of the House be substituted for the secretary of state as the man who would take over the White House in the absence of both an elected president and vice president, now goes to the House floor.

Rep. Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.) is the present House speaker.

Meandering Along the Main Stem

By WASH FAYETTE

You may not think much about what I am going to say here, but in less than a half century historians going through this column will say that this little yarn was certainly prophetic.

It is nothing more or less than a prediction that not many years hence one and possibly several sizeable lakes will be impounded in Fayette County under the conservation program, for the twofold purpose of maintaining a proper water table during droughts and affording recreation facilities such as fishing, boating, bathing and picnicking.

It has been demonstrated in recent years that something must be done to help maintain the water supply during droughts. Scores of farm wells have gone dry, creeks have dried up and this city's water supply has been threatened time after time during the series of droughts.

There are several places in Fayette County ideal for creating lakes with a minimum of inundated farm lands, and I'll venture the prediction that within 10 years development of these prospective lake sites will be well under way, and at least one sizeable lake will have been created.

Fayette County is behind some of her neighbors in obtaining assistance from the Conservation Department for creating lakes by damming streams.

Here's a chance for some of you strong conservationists to get busy and launch a real movement for the first of these lakes.

At the present time I have on my desk a bouquet of very unusual roses. Each of the two clusters contain four distinct colors, ranging from deep pink and deep orange to a delicate shade of pink and an equally delicate shade of orange, all from the same stem. One blossom has both dark pink and light orange petals.

Homer McCoy, of the Good Hope road, brought them to me, and they have attracted much attention. Homer does not know the name of the rose and Einar Jensen, from whom Homer obtained the plant four years ago, had forgotten it. Anyway it is a very beautiful rose to say the least.

WOUNDED VETERANS GET BEDSIDE RADIOS

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., June 27.—(AP)—The army inaugurated today at its Percy Jones General Hospital here a new bedside radio system which officials said probably would be installed later in 29 other army hospitals.

Individual radio receivers at the beds will be operated 14 hours a day, with a choice of four programs. The receivers are flat plastic discs about 5 inches in diameter, attached to the walls.

The soldier-patient turns on the radio by snapping a wall switch, changes programs by jerking a long cord and controls volume by stuffing the receiver under his pillow or by pulling it out.

TAX ALLOCATION PLAN IS SOUGHT

State's Farm Sections Want 'Better Break'

By REED SMITH

COLUMBUS, O., June 27.—(AP)—The battle over sales tax allocations to local governments simmered down today to a compromise figure of at least $16,000,000 annually for 1945-46, a member of the joint legislative conference committee reported, but the distribution formula still was up in the air.

The dispute has been one of the hottest in the current session with Rep. Willis I. Cory (R-Seneca) sponsoring a petition signed by some 60 rural representatives seeking a 10-6 or 8-8 split which he asserted would give agricultural counties a "better break" in allocations.

The senate yesterday unanimously approved $405,500,000 (Please Turn to Page Six)

FISHING ON SUNDAY STILL AGAINST LAW

COLUMBUS, June 27.—(AP)—It's still unlawful to fish in Ohio on Sunday, says Rep. Fred L. Hoffman, Jr. (R-Hamilton).

The Cincinnati attorney attempted to eliminate the penalty of a $20 fine or 20 days in jail, or both, with an amendment to a measure setting up a coordinated state conservation department.

The amendment was approved but the conservation bill was defeated in the House of Representatives last night, leaving the present law in effect, he said.

"My amendment only provided that it no longer would be a crime to do a little fishing on Sunday," Hoffman explained.

MERLE OBERON MARRIES CAMERAMAN BY PROXY

HOLLYWOOD, June 27.—(AP)—A proxy marriage was performed in Mexico yesterday for film actress Merle Oberon, 30, and film cameraman Lucien Keith Ballard, 36, while the two were at work on a movie set here.

Miss Oberon said her attorney arranged for the proxy wedding in Juarez because she and Ballard were unable to leave their work.

Marshal Goering's Wife Living in Bare Castle

By HOWARD COWAN

NEUHAUS, Germany, June 27.—(AP)—Frau Emmy Goering has shut herself up in the rickety old castle which broods over this little farming hamlet, while she awaits the outcome of her husband's trial as a war criminal.

The little cluster of stone-walled dwellings was shelled heavily by American artillery and many homes were burned out. A lieutenant and nine GIs are quarantined in a cobwebby wing of the castle.

Frau Goering, who came here June 9, is not living in luxury.

With Pfc. Joseph Frick, of Flemington, N. J., I spent the better part of an hour talking to her and a governess, Magda.

There are eight persons with Frau Goering including her child, Edda, and her sister, Elsa Sonnemann Altmann. When they arrived there was no furniture in the castle.

Since then the owner of an inn has hauled furniture to the six (Please Turn to Page Two)

WASHINGTON C. H. MAN TESTIFIES IN BRIBE CASE

Trial of Clark Prosecutor Still Under Way in Springfield

A Washington C. H. man, Robert F. Edgington, appeared as a witness for the state during the bribery trial in Clark County Common Pleas Court, Tuesday, where Prosecutor Jerome A. Nevius is on trial charged with bribery, and where Simon Leis, who assisted in the prosecution of James W. Collett, is prosecuting the case.

Edgington testified that he worked as "stick man" at the Silver Dollar dice tables in Clark County, before moving to a Newport, Ky., gambling house.

Meanwhile, the state is continuing its efforts to prove that a $1435 automobile was transferred from a Dayton gambler to prosecutor Nevius.

Nevius is charged with accepting two cars and a sum of money from Joseph Parisi and Ralph Schear, both of Dayton, who will be tried later on charges of giving bribes. The charges center about gambling at the Silver Dollar night club.

Melvin Thomas testified he managed the Silver Dollar for the two accused men, Parisi and Schear, and said customers averaged 100 to 150 on Saturday nights, and that a "crying room" was maintained where losers were consoled.

The numbers racket, involving betting on New York stock and bond sales totals, was described by Mrs. Martha Temple of Dayton, former bookkeeper for Parisi and Schear.

She testified that the numbers "take" in Springfield ran from $200 to $2500 daily and that in Dayton from $3000 to $3500 daily; and that law enforcement officials never disturbed their Dayton headquarters.

The castle has electric lights, running water and modern plumbing. There is no fuel for heating.

"We do all cooking, cleaning and washing," said the governess. Frau Goering said the food was not supplied by the American Army.

"We're not giving them anything," said Pfc. Willard Whittemore, of Glen Falls, N. Y., on guard duty at the gate.

Frau Goering said she had heard nothing from her husband since he surrendered to the U. S. 36th Division. Whittemore said she was not permitted to write letters.

Sgt. Donald Rexilius, of Ceresco, Neb., said the guard is more for their protection than to keep them from running away. The folks in the town think the town wouldn't have been shot up if it hadn't been for the Goerings' home.

They are Pvt. James H. Braun, the son of Mrs. Martha Braun, 517 East Temple Street, and Pfc. Robert McGinnis, the son of Mrs. E. L. Bush, 414 East Market Street.

Both boys landed in Newport News, Va., both went to Camp Atterbury and both came home Tuesday night, but neither saw the other en route. The mothers of both boys said they "look grand."

Pfc. McGinnis arrived home about 6 P. M. Tuesday with a 74 day furlough in his hand. He has been in service since August, 1943, and overseas nearly two years. He was captured January 29 and arrived in the states a week ago.

Pvt. Braun came home about midnight Tuesday. His furlough is 78 days and both he and Pfc. McGinnis are to report to Miami, Fla. after their furloughs. Pvt. Braun, 20, entered the service March 29, 1943, and left for overseas duty in October. He was reported missing in action December 18 and was released from prison on May 23.

Mr. Truman witnessed the signing of the charter by the American delegation. The United States delegation signed in 38th place.

Adjournment had no effect on the signing, which will be completed in Washington since only English and French texts were available today and Chinese, Spanish and Russian are still to come.

Mr. Truman was preceded on the rostrum by the delegation chiefs of the United States, Russia, Britain, China, France, Mexico, Brazil, Saudi Arabia, Czechoslovakia and South Africa.

Over and over again they hampered on these statements: (1) The San Francisco Conference has exceeded expectations in producing a better charter than anybody thought it could, (2) This charter provides for a good piece of machinery but whether it preserves international peace and security depends on how people use it, (3) The nations attending here have conquered many difficulties to come to their final agreement and now have closer friendship and understanding than ever before.

Tiny Tots Nearly Run Over by Automobile

Two very small children who had wandered away from their home on Grace Street and were nearly run over by an automobile as they were crossing Court Street at North, about 4:30 P. M. Tuesday, causing some excitement and almost drove their mother frantic when she found that they were missing.

They were Carolyn, 4, and Larry, 3, children of Mrs. Grover Hilliard, whose husband was killed in Germany, August 20, 1944, Mrs. Hilliard being employed at the Jackson Glove Factory.

The tiny runaways were seen by Mrs. Katie Cox and Doris Deedy, who took them in the Cox automobile, and left them at police headquarters, where the police, firemen and City Manager W. L. Stambaugh entertained them until the frantic mother appeared more than two hours after they had left home.

It seems that she had applied at police headquarters after searching the entire neighborhood for them.

Both youngsters talked freely about everything asked them, except giving their names. They refused to do this, and as a result the police were unable to locate their relatives until the mother appeared at police headquarters and took charge of the pair.

TO FINISH STRIPING IN THE NEAR FUTURE

Plans are being made to complete the striping of streets to guide traffic, in the near future.

Time after time the work has been delayed by rains and it was indicated Wednesday that the center striping and completion of cross lines and other markings will be given attention shortly.

Center lines are badly needed as most of them have all but been obliterated.

The same is true on Mindanao, where Associated Press Correspondent Richard Bergholz reported time and space are running out for the enemy west of Davao. Harried Japanese have reached their last prepared positions in the Talomo-Davao River plain. Although they still are fighting fiercely, Bergholz said it was obvious the strong leadership which characterized the Japanese retreat thus far was breaking and disorganization setting in.

The Yanks have fought their way out of thick Abaca groves of Talomo Plain—the world's greatest hemp producing area—and are moving up into mountainous areas. Other Eighth Army troops on Mindanao hopped up the north coast to the mouth of Agusan River, whose upper reaches probably are a haven for Japanese driven out of the central section.

Bergholz said Davao City, pre-war hotbed of pro-Japanese activity, was a dishonored city, untried by its conquerors. He said most Filipinos were pro-Japanese as a result of the enemy's propaganda campaign.

Australians overran the flaming Miri oil fields of western Borneo while Tokyo continued to report minesweeping and naval bombardment in the Balkan area on the southeast.

Despite Soupy Weather

The Marianas Superfortress fleet added Japan's principal remaining aviation gasoline refinery to its list of bombed industrial targets today.

Fifty fortresses struck the Utsube River Oil Refinery near Yokkaichi, 18 miles southwest of Nagoya, last night—less than 24 hours after 500 other B-29s pounded ten aircraft, gun and ammunition plants in the great-est demolition sweep made against Japan.

Returning airmen reported seeing their bombs strike three of the ten plants Tuesday despite soupy weather which often reduced visibility to wingtip distance. Icing conditions and adverse winds forced more than 70 Superfortresses to make emergency stops at Iwo Jima en route home.

Five B-29s failed to return. Okinawa-based marine and army Corsairs, Thunderbolts and Avengers reported destruction of 596½ Japanese aircraft from mid-April to Sunday.

Lt. Col. Cecil Durbin, Mt. Vernon, O., group flight commander in the strike on the Sumitomo light metal industry plant at Osaka, described a narrow escape from ramming by a single-engine Japanese Tony freighter in thick overcast above the target.

"We could barely see beyond our wings. After we dropped our bombs we were boring through the mist and met the Tony almost directly head-on. Neither our plane nor the Jap had a chance to fire although we passed within yards of one another. Both of us kept right on going through the fog," Durbin said.

Ushijima and Cho knelt on the sheet. The narrowness of the ledge prevented them from facing north towards the imperial palace.

An aide held two knives. An adjutant, with drawn saber, stood on Ushijima's right. Both generals bared their abdomens. As Ushijima plunged a knife into his stomach, the adjutant swung his saber downward, severing the general's spinal column. He tumbled forward dead.

Cho went through an identical ceremony.

The bodies were found Monday by a patrol led by Col. John

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

While we are surf-riding on the crest of the wave of hope from the San Francisco Security Conference, we shouldn't overlook that another peace parley of the utmost importance to the world is being held in far away India.

That's the renewed British-Indian effort to reach a compromise on the grave political problem which has torn that great sub-continent for decades. Solution of this problem would do more than any other single event (barring the defeat of Japan) to consolidate the East and West in fellowship—for mighty India's sympathetic neighbors are watching anxiously. Failure to solve it will increase the danger of the formation of a powerful Asiatic bloc hostile to the western world.

There's some encouragement in the fact that this is the first time all the warring Indian factions have got together for discussions with the British since the ill-fated round-table conferences of 1930-31 in London. Never before, so far as I recall, have they met in India. It will be remembered that during Sir Stafford Cripps' mission in 1942 he conferred with the various Indian parties, but dealt with them separately and they had little or no contact with each other.

If, with these favorable circumstances, the combatants can't get together now, then there's only one alternative. In the Simla Mountains there are native tribes which practice matriarchy—where the woman is head of the home and has the privilege of marrying several husbands and bossing them. Well, if the men of India and England can't reconcile their differences, why not turn the job over to the women? If that seems over facetious for a serious subject, it's meant to emphasize that it's a grievance shared by both sides that a grievance should have protracted such a grievous quarrel.

The British proposal which is under consideration provides for a new governmental set-up which would give to Indians virtually all the cabinet posts. The British Viceroy would remain, and the British would retain control of

WAR IN SHANGRI-LA HAMBERS RESCUERS

WACs and 14 Escorts Are in No Danger, Though

HOLLANDIA, New Guinea, June 24.—(Delayed)—(AP) — A private war among the natives of Shangri-La and their belligerent neighbors added today to the complications of bringing a Wac and 14 escorts from this hidden valley of New Guinea.

About the time mechanical failures and lack of sufficient equipment arose to plague the work of the Army Air Force rescuers, along came the battle among the Aborigines.

Not that the battle between the Shangri-Laians and their unidentified native enemies is imperiling the party stranded in the mountain-locked valley, but the warfare is edging uncomfortably close.

military affairs. This seems to protect an interim government which would pace the way for the sovereign dominion status which England has promised.

As a gesture of amity the British government released the members of the all-India Congress who have been in prison since their civil disobedience campaign in 1942 after the failure of the Cripps' mission. While this campaign was begun under the leadership of Gandhi on a non-violence basis, it was accompanied by widespread bloodshed and destruction of property by elements which refused to accept the non-violence code.

Among those released is the famous Nehru who, next to Gandhi, is the greatest Hindu leader. With Nehru still in prison, the Simla Conference couldn't have been held. With Nehru free the picture is brighter.

Gandhi, the most powerful figure in India, and Mohammed Ali Jinnah, the brilliant head of the All-India Muslim League, are the keys to the Indian attitude toward British proposals which are being put forward by the Viceroy, Field Marshal Lord Wavell. If the politically hostile Gandhi and Jinnah can bury the hatchet, it will be a mighty step toward answering a problem which the writer is convinced, from long study of the question in India itself, can be solved.

Mr. and Mrs. Galen Kirkpatrick, of New Holland, have received the official citation of award of the Silver Star Medal to their son, S-Sgt. Robert W. Kirkpatrick, the award having been made by Major General Isaac D. White, commanding the Second Armored Division, at Heerte, Germany.

The medal is for valiant action in the battles against the Germans. The citation reads: "Staff Sergeant Robert W. Kirkpatrick, 35270614, 67th Armored Regiment, United States Army. For gallantry in action against the enemy on 1 March 1945 in Germany. On the 1 March 1945, in the vicinity of Greifath, Germany, Staff Sergeant Kirkpatrick, after his three mortar carrying half-tracks were disabled by enemy fire, skillfully dispersed his platoon so that only three men were wounded other than those wounded in the initial attack. Ordering his men to stay in their relative places of safety, Staff Sergeant Kirkpatrick then fearlessly exposed himself to the crossfire of 20mm and 40mm anti-aircraft in order to render first aid to the wounded men. The valor and courage displayed by Staff Sergeant Kirkpatrick reflect great credit upon himself and are in keeping with the highest traditions of the Military Service. Entered Military Service from Ohio.

Selfishness vs. Common Sense

On the day that Senators Ball, Burton and Hatch announced their proposed new labor relations code, the wartime no-strike pledge was in effect. Yet some 20,000 workers were on strike in war or war-related industries. Production was stopped or curtailed on a variety of needed items, including steel, armaments, tires and farm machinery.

The Army was operating a chemical plant and truck lines. Jurisdictional trouble had broken out between the AFL and CIO in Detroit auto factories as first steps were being taken toward the resumption of civilian production.

The news added up to a disquieting reminder that the critical period of reconversion might be rendered more critical by a sudden flaring up of long-suppressed grievances between management and workers and within the ranks of labor.

So it was good to see beside that news the proposal of three able, progressive, public-spirited senators to reorganize the whole industrial structure toward the end of avoiding what might well be a chaotic and destructive free-for-all.

"We propose," said Senator Hatch, "that the last surviving field in which civil warfare is tolerated shall be transformed into a field of industrial peace."

It is a little shocking to see industrial strife described in such blunt terms. But when one recalls our industrial record of pitched battles, bloodshed, and loss of life and property, "civil warfare" is the only proper term.

The national shame of that record is probably the worst instance in American life of a clumsy, retarded, wasteful and sometimes brutal system still existing in the midst of material progress. With the world's powers on the way toward evolving a system whereby nations can live in peace, it is certainly time that this country really went to work to lick the comparatively simpler problem of settling industrial disputes without physical violence and economic suffering.

The reason why that problem hasn't been licked is that all concerned have been too greedy, selfish, spiteful or stupid to tackle it with complete good faith. That goes for industrialists, union leaders, and the congresses and administrations which have variously played off one side against the other.

The three senators and their advisers do not claim the new bill to be the last word. They invite criticism and suggestion, and they will get plenty. But they have chosen an excellent model in the Railway Labor Act. And they have shown admirable wisdom in attempting a code that would promote the whole people's welfare

Flashes of Life

WASHINGTON —(P)—American armies driving across western Europe left behind them enough wire to go 35 times around the equator, says the office of Chief Signal Officer. Nearly 900,000 miles of field wire and cable were strung across the battlefields of France, Belgium, Holland and Germany.

Poor Organization

Reports from the southwest say that grain elevators are filled and part of the new wheat crop is being dumped because of lack of transportation from elevator to miller.

The Office of Defense Transportation says that the railroads are carrying more grain now than at the comparable period last year, and that the situation is well in hand.

Somebody seems to be wrong, and everybody seems to be confused. And this isn't the first instance of the wartime food record when those concerned didn't know what the score was.

Perhaps the score will be kept better when Rep. Clinton Anderson assumes his new double job of Secretary of Agriculture and War Food Administrator. The job merger should help. And it will help more if Mr. Anderson can manage to maintain a closer liaison with the various agencies who seem to be going their separate ways in trying to solve the increasingly perplexing problem of getting food out of the fields and off the range and onto the wartime table.

It used to be that every new automobile model was perfectly beautiful when it appeared, and perfectly ugly three years later. They stay beautiful longer nowadays and are loved in their old age as never before. And the new ones of 1946 will be beautiful to their buyers no matter what they look like.

The trend in this country is pensions for everybody except employers; and theirs may come in time.

Washington at a Glance

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — A column a few weeks ago has resulted in some interesting mail. I have picked out the letter that best sums it up and raises most of the points to be answered. It is from Carl F. Hedenskog, Pueblo, Colo.

Mr. Hedenskog says: "I note with interest and envy your article in the Pueblo Star-Journal that we still have 125 pounds of meat per person per year."

"My bitter (sic) half says the average pound of meat takes eight red points. That means 125 times eight red points is 1,000 points. The allotment is 50 red points a month. Twelve times 50 red points is obvious (600 for those of you who read faster than you multiply).

"Perhaps some of the higher mathematical can figure out how the average person is going to get his share of meat, to say nothing of a little cooking fat, a little pat of butter semi-occasionally and a sliver of cheese with the apple pie — if she had the grease to make the crust."

"Seriously though, butter is 24 points; cooking fat 10 (now 12) points per pound. That leaves 16 red points and if one buys two pounds of meat, he's done for the month. Believe our nutrition experts would classify that as a deficiency diet."

"Do you suppose this might be one of the causes that make black markets flourish?"

To the last, Mr. Hedenskog, the answer definitely is "YES." You are also right in your reasoning about the rest of it. But in that other column, I was talking about something else — distribution.

Armed with your letter and others, I attacked the OPA. Here's their answer. In the first place, the "official" estimate I used for the 1945 meat supply came from other sources. The OPA says their "official" estimate on per capita meat supply for 1945 is 115 pounds, but that actually "only about half of that meat will move against ration stamps (for civilians)."

These are OPA Administrator Chester Bowles own words. He explains it this way: (1) Figures on available meats (this deals only with the red blooded meats — beef, pork, veal, lamb, and mutton) are based on "carcass" weights. Shrinkage, trimmings, etc., take off at least 15 per cent before the meat ever crosses the retail butcher's counter.

In addition, millions of persons in this country get their meat in restaurants, hospitals, school lunch rooms, war plants, on farms, in stamp-free processed foods (soups, baby foods, pork and beans, pharmaceuticals). The black market gets the rest.

"Thus," says Mr. Bowles,

"instead of 115 pounds or more on civilian ration points, it is likely that only about 60 pounds on an annual basis will be available at retail counters for the average ration book holder."

That, of course, still doesn't take into consideration the distribution problem I previously mentioned here. Mr. Bowles doesn't see how it can be made much more equitable but he is very frank in saying that OPA is weighing every possibility of eliminating the black market and making it possible at least for the housewife to feed her family something better than a pound and a quarter of rationed, red-blooded meat a week.

As for the salad oils, vegetable compounds, etc., now under red points, OPA just hangs its head in shame. Strictly off the record they wish it had never been started that way, but think it's too late in the game now to change.

As I have said all along, Mr. Hedenskog (and you others who have written in) the situation is going to get worse before it gets better, but don't take all of it out on OPA. Sometimes it seems they can't add two and two, but often their problems are practically integral calculus, with almost as many unknowns as there are meat-eaters, producers, distributors, and members of Congress.

Allergy Control by Observation

By HERMAN N. RUNDESEN, M. D.

ALLERGY refers to a condition in which an individual is over-sensitive to some food, pollen, dust or other substance. The substance may get into the body by being breathed in, or by being eaten. In allergy, the patient may have various symptoms, depending upon the part of the body affected. Common forms of allergy consist of perennial rhinitis and asthma.

In perennial rhinitis, there is almost a continuous watery discharge from the nose with a great deal of sneezing. In asthma, there is wheezing, cough, and the bringing up of sputum from the lung.

Treating Allergy

In treating these allergic disorders, an effort is made to find the substance to which the patient is sensitive and to eliminate contact with them. According to Doctor Herbert J. Rinkel of Kansas City, Missouri, it is usually not difficult to discover the substances to which the patient is sensitive that get into the body through the air passages, but it is more difficult to find foods to which the patient reacts. Of course, skin tests are made to obtain this information, but these skin tests are not always accurate.

A skin test is carried out by injecting a few drops of extracts of the various foods, under the skin, and noting whether a reaction in the form of a red swelling occurs.

Trying Various Foods

Doctor Rinkel has devised a simplified method for trying various foods to determine if the person is sensitive to them. Among the foods to which the patients react most frequently are wheat, eggs, milk, corn, oranges and tomatoes. The patient may also have suspicions that some certain foods cause his difficulty.

Just whistle a bit, if the day be dark,
And the sky be overcast;
If mute be the voice of the piping lark,
Why, whistle your own 'small blast.

Just whistle a bit, if your heart be sore;
'Tis a wonderful balm for pain.
Just pipe some old melody o'er
Till it soothes like summer rain.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

IT WAS a tense, difficult evening. Brooks, Artigas and the political leaders were in heavy conference in Brooks' study.

More like a third degree, Terry suspected. They were undoubtedly giving him reasons they couldn't give at the table why he must call a temporary halt to Jim's housing project. Well, apparently he was being stubborn about it. As the clock crept on, he felt prouder of Brooks than ever.

Jim echoed her thoughts aloud. "Perhaps," she said hopefully, as she dealt the bridge hand, "Brooks is going to save the project."

Corinne's slender fingers were twisting her exquisite rings nervously. "More probably," she said sharply, "he is talking himself out of a career."

Raff scoffed lightly. "Not Brooks. They're lucky to have him to run, and they know it."

Corinne picked up her cards in a sullen movement, sorted them, while her voice lashed out at Raff. "Oh, do they? I hate to disillusion you, darling. But Father did some hard talking to get them to consider Brooks in the first place. Brooks is young, inexperienced. And he's running for an important office. It's a superb opportunity. It can lead to anything. And now, if he acts like a stubborn boy and blocks it—!" Her voice choked with a half sob of anger and Jim patted her hand.

"He won't," she promised Corinne cheerfully. "They'll only respect him more for having a mind of his own." She smiled reminiscently as she pulled in a trick. "They'll have to learn he has the peon's interests at heart. Once, when he was at Oxford, his father was more than worried about him, and he radical, leftist views. Expected he'd come home and start a revolution."

Raff laughed. He remembered those days. Brooks was quite the soap box orator at Oxford. Even the baroness, huddled over her puzzle, remembered the intense school-boy Brooks, who used to come with his parents to her villa near Vienna.

Thirstily, Terry found herself drinking in each detail. Of course, that would be Brooks' boyhood. Serious, eager, fighting for the underdog, disdaining class privileges, feeling only class responsibility. Seeing only fairness, justice, equality.

"He'll make a wonderful public leader." She didn't realize she had said the words aloud until the three turned to her.

"I think so," Jim said quickly, "unless I'm prejudiced."

"He will," Corinne flared irritably, "unless he kills himself politically over some trifle like this peon trouble."

"But that's exactly—" Terry caught herself before she had made an issue of the point with the nervous Corinne. She excused herself soon after to go to her room. Once more her emotions had almost betrayed her.

Raff caught her at the stairs. For an instant she thought he was going to demand her answer to his proposal. But he only grinned at her and murmured:

"There'll be no work on the houses tomorrow. Will you go for a picnic with me?"

Terry smiled, relieved. "It sounds like fun. Why not?"

The next morning, a good hour before trysting time, Terry came down to the dining room in her riding habit. She was glad in a way, to miss Angela. The child would be in a state this morning over the news that the houses might be stopped.

Raff was already at the table. He leaped up with a glad shout. "Buenos Dias, Senorita."

And Brooks in boots and whipcords, helping himself to scrambled eggs at the sideboard, turned to smile at her.

Terry knelt again that quick shock of feeling at the unexpected sight of him. She came across to serve herself, asking casually, to cover her sudden hope, "Well, we are a big party. Are you going picnicking, too, Brooks?"

"Not me," said Brooks. "I'm riding with Sandy over to the Mendoza estancia to see a demonstration of one of your Norte American harvesters."

"You needn't bother," Terry said diffidently. "They wouldn't have brought it way down here if it were not worth buying."

"Yankee salesmanship," Raff scoffed. "Watch it, Brooks. Personally, I'm skeptical of any machine that can plow, harrow, plant seed and croon lullabies to teris at the same time."

"Ho, that's child's play for one of our machines," scoffed Terry.

They went together after breakfast down the drive that led to both stables and garage.

Raff said, "If you don't mind my butting in, Brooks, you're making a mountain out of a molehill."

"What do you mean by that?"

Brooks asked. Raff stopped to light a cigaret for himself and Terry. "I mean I heard you pacing your room last night," he said. "And you're going along with Sandy today to get away from those politicians and think. Why don't you stop fighting them? Jim and I and Terry are the ones who started this housing project. And we're willing to postpone it."

"Yes," Terry said slowly. "If it's critical to your career."

Brooks said, "I'm still not convinced it is."

"But what's the difference?" Raff cried impatiently. "A few months' wait—"

"Sen—or—eee—ta!" The childish wail wafted through the morning air with fierce desperation. They turned. A five-year-old peon child was racing toward them from the corner of the garage.

"What's the matter, Bartolme?" Terry cried.

The child reached Terry and clung to her, sobbing, furious plea to come with him. They had thrown him out of the house!

They followed him around the garage. And their perplexed faces suddenly struggled to control amused smiles. Two peon children—a boy of five and a girl of four—were playing in the foundation laid for the first peon house. When Bartolme, taking courage from his powerful reinforcements, made a fresh attempt to step over the low foundation, the two in possession resisted. There was no physical struggle. It was clear to the watching three that, in the children's minds, there were walls to the house. Though Bartolme pounded, the door was still locked against him. The pantomime and shouts of the other two were the proud, possessive gestures of those who are lords of their manor.

Terry's own eyes were misty as she watched the play of these children that reflected the fierce spirit of joy of the parents in these cities which were to be theirs. She realized suddenly that Brooks was smiling at her.

His voice was low and filled with feeling. "You see, don't you," he said, "what a few months would mean."

Then he was gone, striding toward the car that Sandy was backing from the garage, leaving Terry breathless from the thrill of that sudden shared moment.

Ultra-Modern City Is Planned at Toledo

TOLEDO, O., June 27—(P)—A quarter-million dollar scale model of "Toledo tomorrow," a city that would have no slums, traffic jams or smoke, makes its debut July 4.

Built by an array of the nation's best designers and engineers, the 61-foot model embodies the hopes of Toledo for a future city that would have:

A downtown airport, serviced by a terminal that also would receive rail and bus traffic approaching via subways;

Depressed super-thoroughfares through the city, without stop lights and cross traffic;

Parks and apartment buildings where now are slum districts and ramshackle shops;

Consolidated freight and marshalling yards, far from business or residential districts;

Underground routes for trains entering the city, belt lines for those not needing to enter;

Relocation of heavy industry away from the city proper.

It's a plan of gradual rebuilding, far into the future, and it's the product of Toledo's leaders, organized into the "Toledo tomorrow committee."

The Toledo Blade conceived the original idea of the model. The newspaper also assumed the cost of its creation and presentation as a contribution to the desire of Toledo citizens for a better planned, more livable and prosperous city in years to come.

Normal Bel Geddes, New York industrial designer, bossed the building of the model, collaborating with such advisors as Major Alexander De Seversky, aviation engineer, Earle Andrews, highway authority, and others.

Business buildings in Toledo tomorrow would tend away from the skyscraper design—most would be two or three stories in height. Back of this is a hope to eliminate the traffic jams that result when huge quitting-time crowds pour into the streets at the same time and place.

The airport in the heart of Toledo would accommodate both gasoline and jet propulsion planes, and would be possible, says Major De Seversky, because there'll be new developments to improve landing habits of planes, and there'll be no tall buildings skirting the fields.

The cost of Toledo tomorrow would be shared by local, state and federal governments. And, says Clayton L. Piper, Toledo commissioner of engineering, "since transportation and modern housing are a part of Toledo tomorrow, part of the cost necessarily would be borne by private enterprise."

Built at a scale of one inch to 100 feet, the model is to serve as a guide for all future building in the city, Piper explained, adding:

"Improvements would have to be made in the postwar years, even if they didn't fit into a coordinated plan. We feel that these and future projects will achieve their maximum value when carried out in accordance with a master plan."

Some existing streets would be included in the future Toledo, but many miles of new roadway, and several bridges, would have to be built.

Power lines would go underground, and many existing houses would be torn down. Thousands of families, in fact, who now live in the shadow of business and industrial districts would be resettled in some score of parking-fringed residential areas, each with a separate shopping district.

Leaving details to the future, the model is a master plan to guide the broader phases of reconstruction, "which represent a synthesis of the social, economic and other factors favoring the many-sided life of a modern city."

Piper commented.

Members of the Toledo tomorrow committee are:

Mayor Lloyd E. Roulet, Vice Mayor Michael V. O. Sale, City Manager George N. Schoonmaker; Arthur R. Cline, chairman of the Toledo and Lucas County plan commission; County Engineer Bernard C. Kesting;

Piper, Louis H. Sanzenbacher, president of county commissioners; Frank A. Sohn, chairman Metropolitan planning commission; Joseph A. Yager, chairman Toledo regional planning association; Dr. Phillip C. Nash, president Toledo University; Charles A. Wertz, committee secretary, and Paul Block, Jr., co-publisher the Toledo Blade.

INSURANCE TALK IS HEARD HERE BY ROTARY CLUB

Dr. W. H. Limes Is Presented Plaque as He Retires as Club President

A brief ceremony marking the ending of the term of W. H. Limes as president of the Washington C. H. Rotary Club and the beginning of the term of Billie Wilson, together with an outstanding vocational talk by Charles Adams of Columbus, president of the Ohio State Life Insurance Company, were the highlights of the program Tuesday following the weekly club luncheon at the Country Club.

The talk by Adams proved very interesting to the members and guests by reason of his handling his subject from the broad viewpoint of insurance as a progressive movement in public social welfare and betterment as well as a powerful national influence among a majority of the people for higher civic standards. He gave the impression of being a very sound and clear thinker.

He related briefly how the insurance business started with Lloyds of London in the coffee house which served as a meeting place for those concerned with maritime projects and other business. At first wagers were made concerning the safe return of certain ships and delivery of their cargoes and in this way certain owners covered possible losses. Out of this developed the much polder and more effective insurance business which expanded into many forms covering not only business matters but life and health.

The speaker told how one dollar out of each six dollars paid out by his company on deaths in Ohio since the beginning of the present war had been due to deaths in combat service but that the total overall mortality payments have been less during this period than in former years. This he said might be due to reduced use of automobiles and perhaps simpler living by many people.

Social Security and Insurance
Touching upon the effect of federal social security payments on insurance, Adams declared that well informed insurance people of the country do not look upon this with alarm provided the social security payments are held to minimum subsistence amounts as was originally intended; but if politicians insist upon raising these amounts to high levels, as some have suggested, grave danger threatens the whole industrial structure of the nation since such a move will have a tendency to make many lose interest in their work, will create a lack of ambition, alertness and initiative, as long as many of those receiving high social security payments feel that they can have taxpayers and industry keep them in comparative ease. "The correct theory behind social security," Adams said, "is that only enough should be paid to form a subsistence base for the individual so that he will, by his own effort, seek to provide some estate for himself which will earn him the funds for additional comforts he desires."

He also spoke of the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, some time ago, which sought to take the insurance organizations out from under state control and place them under the federal government. He pointed out that the insurance business had prospered and has given great service to the people under control of the various states and that the danger of placing all these companies under federal control on the theory that they are doing an inter-state business, would result in a further increase of federal control of private enterprise and industry and would give one federal bureau supervision of all funds which rightfully belonged to individual citizens. He declared that Congress is planning legislation to adjust difficulties raised by the court decision.

President Limes thanked the speaker for his informative talk and complimented him upon the logical explanation of the broad features of the business which helped many to a better understanding of what the insurance business really means to the nation.

Plaque for Limes
A brief summary of the Rotary Club's accomplishments during the past year was given by Dr. Limes, outgoing president. He thanked his fellow officers, directors and club members for their cooperation and help during the year and then introduced the new president, to arise while he pinned upon him the presidential button. Wilson responded appropriately and declared it was his hope that he could continue the good work so well carried on under President Limes' administration, and that he could have the same loyal support which the club members had rendered Dr. Limes.

President-elect Wilson then presented the past president's pin to Dr. Limes and immediately thereafter Lowell Hayes, a member of the board of directors spoke cordially of the excellent service the outgoing president had given and in appreciation of a job well done presented to him an engraved plaque from his fellow club members. Dr. Limes was visibly moved by this kindly act and with difficulty expressed his sincere thanks.

Sgt. Martin Wike, of the U. S. Air Corps, who has been doing special work at Patterson Field, Dayton, was among the club guests at this meeting.

DOZEN DIVORCE SUITS IN ROW

Eight Husbands and Four Wives Are Plaintiffs

The last dozen suits filed in the Fayette Common Pleas Court have been divorce actions. It is interesting to note that eight of the plaintiffs are the husbands, and that several of those filing have been in the armed forces and two or three of them make serious charges in their suits.

So far as known the number of divorces filed without any other court actions being brought, is a new record, and June promises to establish an all time record to date for the number of divorces filed in a single month, as well as the ratio of divorces to the number of marriage licenses issued.

NEW VETERINARIAN IN BLOOMINGBURG

Dr. D. E. Mossbarger Will Open His Office Friday

Dr. D. E. Mossbarger, who graduated from Ohio State University June 8, will open his office as a veterinarian in Bloomingburg Friday.

Dr. and Mrs. Mossbarger are living on Midland Avenue in Bloomingburg in the old Klever home. Dr. Mossbarger will establish a routine practice. He said Wednesday he chose Bloomingburg because of its location in a good farming country and because the town needed a veterinarian. He is a native of Clarksburg and graduated from high school there before entering OSU.

The past year was given by Dr. Limes, outgoing president. He thanked his fellow officers, directors and club members for their cooperation and help during the year and then introduced the new president, to arise while he pinned upon him the presidential button. Wilson responded appropriately and declared it was his hope that he could continue the good work so well carried on under President Limes' administration, and that he could have the same loyal support which the club members had rendered Dr. Limes.

President-elect Wilson then presented the past president's pin to Dr. Limes and immediately thereafter Lowell Hayes, a member of the board of directors spoke cordially of the excellent service the outgoing president had given and in appreciation of a job well done presented to him an engraved plaque from his fellow club members. Dr. Limes was visibly moved by this kindly act and with difficulty expressed his sincere thanks.

Sgt. Martin Wike, of the U. S. Air Corps, who has been doing special work at Patterson Field, Dayton, was among the club guests at this meeting.

JEFFERSONVILLE BOY SCOUTS ARE BUSY IN SUMMER

Ten Day Camping Trip Is Scheduled; Preparations Underway Now

Jeffersonville Boy Scouts aren't going to be idle this summer. Next on the schedule is a ten-day camp, under Scoutmaster Clark Robinson and his assistant, Marvin Dement. The camp will be somewhere near Bainbridge but the exact spot has not yet been selected. The camp will begin August 6.

Right now, the troop is busy renovating its camping equipment. All tent poles and stakes have been painted and three new mess tables and six new benches are to be built next week.

Earlier in June, the Explorer Scouts of Troop 67 went on an expedition to the Scioto Trail State Forest and made camp on the shore of Caldwell Lake, David Baughn, Lee Draper, Jr., Le-Roy Stultz, Robert Bowen and Donald McCoy were on the trip which was termed such a success that others are planned soon.

The Eagle Patrol of the troop went on an overnight hike to Allen's Woods near Jeffersonville. Patrol Leader Jimmy Robinson, Karl Roger Brown, Carl Nathan Creamer, Carl Roger Klever, Harold Houseman and Jackie Milled are members of that troop. A truckload of 28 Jeffersonville Scouts went to London Sunday for an afternoon of swimming. Ford Ervin furnished the transportation.

The bulk of Costa Rica exports go to the United States.
